NO TASK TOO HARD FOR MEN OF U. S., SAYS GEN. DEGOUTTE

French Leader Places Pershing's Troops and French Divisions Under Him Absolutely On a Par—New York Boy Braves Barrage to Take Colonel Some Crullers.

(By Lincoln Eyre.)
(Copyright, 1918, by New York World.)
With the American Forces North of the Oureq—Gen. Degoutte, commander of the French army under which the Americans on this front are operating, has assured the war correspondents that he has placed the French-American divisions under his command on a par.

The general spoke of the Americans in the highest terms and gave us to understand that he deemed no task too difficult for them.
With regard to the situation Gen. Degoutte was careful not to express too optimistic an opinion. There were many obstacles ahead, he said, and just how far we will be able to progress cannot be stated with any great degree of precision. There were excellent reasons, he added, to hope that the Germans will be thrown back (further), but the force with which they now are seeking to oppose our attacks on Meuse forest, he pointed out, are formidable and have been instructed to hold out to the last gasp.

Gen. Degoutte made clear on a huge map that the imperial general staff certainly intended to move westward on Paris along the Marne valley, once they were completely astraddle the river. This peril, he added, has permanently been averted by the allied blow from Soissons to Chateau-Thierry, and as a result in less than a fortnight the foe had been hurled back to a maximum depth of eighteen miles. The general terminated the interview by expressing his high opinion of the American press, and told the correspondents they were welcome in the zone occupied by his army.

Watched the Barrage.
From army headquarters I went to a certain hill and watched the preparatory barrage in one of our attacks crash down upon the German lines. Even to my untechnical eye the fury of our fire was far more tremendous than any shelling our boys have had to endure—and they've survived some mighty heavy ones.
A screen of smoke was thrown up by explosives and shells which completely obscured the green bluffs north of the river along which both our lines and the enemy's lie.

Through glasses I could dimly distinguish men moving about in that mist of smoke and shell. Suddenly one of the figures detached itself from a group and ran straight down to the Oureq, dashed across the footbridge, and leaping from a shell hole came right up the hill to where I was standing. It was Capt. George A. McArdle, of New York City. The panting captain explained that he had just been ordered home to join a new unit. The order had reached him while he was waiting to lead his men against the foe.

"It was hard to obey," he observed, "but I was directed to report immediately to divisional headquarters, so here I am."
Such are the eccentricities of the battle of the Oureq.
American heroes do not realize the extraordinary things they have done.

Harry W. Tupman, of New York City, whose father is a linotype operator on the World, told me in the most matter-of-fact fashion and with a broad grin how he had taken a basket of crullers down to his colonel in the latter's combat post, a couple of miles back.
